Brief Description

The state of peace and security in Africa remains fragile. The number and intensity of armed conflict remains high, with new crises erupting and old tenuous situations relapsing back into conflict. Moreover, and despite the concerted efforts of African countries and the support of the international community, African states continue to suffer from the lack of needed capacities to respond to the wide range of transnational threats to peace, security and stability. As a result, continental and regional actors are searching for new and innovative approaches for prevention and resolution of conflicts.

CCCPA has been supported by UNDP projects funded by the Government of Japan, with the aim of strengthening its institutional capacity and providing various partners in the region with trainings to build capacities in dealing with the myriad of threats, challenges and risks to peace and security in the continent in an effective and timely manner. This new phase of the project aims to continue to respond to the increasing demand for capacity building, through training and research activities of CCCPA on the national, sub-regional, regional and continental levels.

The expected project's outputs are:

- Supporting TICAD VI outcomes.
- Enhance capacities of local African leaders for preventing radicalization and extremism leading to terrorism.
- Enhanced African capacities in peacekeeping.
- Enhanced African capacities in conflict prevention and resolution, crisis management, and peacebuilding.
- Enhance African capacities to deal with cross border challenges, including combating human trafficking and smuggling of migrants and other forms of organized crimes, such as the illicit flow of small arms and light weapons.

I. SITUATION ANALYSIS

1.1 Background

- 1- The state of peace and security in Africa remained fragile in 2016. On one hand, the number and intensity of armed conflict remained high, with new crises erupting in Burundi and the Gambia, and tenuous situation in South Sudan relapsing back into conflict. Moreover, situations in Mali, the Central African Republic and the Democratic Republic of Congo remained delicate.
- 2- On the other hand, transnational threats, most notably terrorism, human trafficking, smuggling of migrants<sup>1</sup>, and the illicit flow of small arms and light weapons (SALW), continued not only to wreak havoc on entire regions, but also to siphon resources away from African countries' developmental efforts. They also exacted a heavy toll on their human capital. Of particular concern in 2016, one that is likely to continue in 2017, was the growing convergence between terrorist and criminal organizations operating in the same space at the same time.
- 3- In response to this myriad of threats and their ever-evolving nature, structures and mechanisms of the African Peace and Security Architecture (APSA) continue to adapt, with varying degrees of success. On one hand, and despite lingering challenges, the African Standby Force (ASF) has been declared operational. An African Capability for Immediate Response to Crises (ACIRC) is in place. Moreover, the African Union (AU) has taken the lead in running a peacekeeping mission (Somalia) or has deployed alongside the United Nations (Darfur).
- 4- On the other hand, the AU's tools for conflict prevention, management and resolution are at various stages of their development. Early warning systems of both the AU and regional economic communities (RECs) are established, connected and deliver analysis and recommendations for policymakers. The AU and RECs conduct mediation in various conflict situations. Nevertheless, mediation structures and frameworks are not yet established or operational, necessitating a concerted and sustained effort in building and enhancing African capacities.
- 5- For its part, the United Nations continues to rely heavily on peacekeeping as the tool of first choice for maintaining peace and security in Africa. Today, eight of the sixteen active UN peacekeeping missions are deployed in Africa. As a result, demand for well-trained peacekeepers, including from African countries, is at records high. Moreover, and as a truly multilateral effort, harmonization of peacekeeping training and operational standards and guidelines continues to be a challenge.

<sup>1</sup>According to the International Organization for Migration, although the number of arrivals by sea in southern Europe dropped from over a million in 2015 to around 350 thousand in 2016, the number of people who died or lost at sea increased by about a third from 3771 to 4913.

with the UN Office of Military Affairs to organize the first regional seminar in Africa and the Arab world to introduce the new Military Unit Manuals.

- 11- As an African Union Center of Excellence, CCCPA has continued its contribution to the ever evolving African peace and security architecture. In October 2016, CCCPA hosted the 7th Annual African Union Retreat for Mediators and Peace Envoys. It continued to provide training to African peacekeepers deployed in missions in the continent, including conducting the African Union Senior Mission Leaders (AU SML) training program, the most important training in the areas of peace and security in Africa, in cooperation with the AU Commission.
- 12- In addition, CCCPA continues to increase its footprint in the global training for peace community. In 2015, CCCPA assumed the presidency of the African Peace Support Trainers Association (APSTA) for one year and hosted the Association's annual meeting in 2016. Also last year, and after securing its bid to host the annual meeting of the International Association for Peacekeeping Training Centers (IAPTC) in 2017, and joining the Executive Committee of the Association for the period 2015-2019, CCCPA was also chosen to host the Secretariat of the Association starting for the period 2017-2022. CCCPA has also joined the Integrated Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Training Group in 2016, and was elected as co-chair and host of the annual meeting of the group in 2017.
- 13- During last year, CCCPA also continued its substantial contribution to the ongoing policy debates on the future of peacekeeping and peacebuilding. In cooperation with the President of the UN General Assembly (PGA), CCCPA organized a high-level workshop on the Arab perspectives on the Future of the UN Peace and Security Architecture in Cairo in March 2016. During the same month, CCCPA also co-organized an African workshop on the same topic in Addis Ababa (Ethiopia). Both workshops were held in preparation for the High Level Thematic Debate organized by the PGA in New York in May 2016, wherein CCCPA was one of only three think tanks/training centers that were invited to brief the UN General Assembly on the outcomes of the regional discussions. CCCPA also played host to the Ministerial Breakfast in New York in May 2016 on "The Future of UN Peace and Security Architecture: A Continuum of Response through Different Stages of Conflict", attended by the Japanese Deputy Foreign Minister.
- 14- In light of the above, CCCPA is best suited to play a growing role in building the capacities of African nations in areas of cross-border challenges including combating terrorism and extremist ideology leading to it, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and crisis management and conflict resolution.

their personnel who meet the criteria outlined by the Center. In this regard, growing relations with these stakeholders have over the years enhanced the quality of candidates sent to the Center and have increased CCCPA's involvement in the individual selection process. Where civilians are concerned, CCCPA will leverage its established network of partner organizations and experts, as well as its alumni network to target appropriate participants for training. Target beneficiaries of the civilian component will vary widely depending on the activity, but will generally include national authorities working on the subjects, parliamentarians, and media professionals.

- 21- Recognizing the interdependent world we live in, and that lessons learned within the African context may have a fundamental impact on other regions and the international community as a whole, CCCPA will seek to share the rich knowledge it acquires by expanding its convening and publication activities. CCCPA will also further expand its evidence-based policy-oriented research. Workshops and conferences organized in the implementation of this project will result in a variety of research products, including workshops/conference reports, that ensures that outcomes and expert knowledge is made available and widely disseminated. In addition, and as the need arises, CCCPA will be issuing "Calls for Papers" and commissioning authors to produce papers to be published by the Center. This is in line with CCCPA's objective of gaining greater visibility, strengthening its role in knowledge creation and management, and contributing to its efforts in sustaining peace, security and stability in Africa.
- 22- CCCPA's monitoring and evaluation framework will be further updated and refined. In addition to the constant elaboration on the system that was set in place three years ago, and following the exchange among other African centers for training on peace and security, especially those who receive funds from the Government of Japan, CCCPA intends to further use best practices and learned experiences to further improve its system.
- 23- As a means of measuring immediate impact of training on participants' knowledge, CCCPA will further develop its training assessment mechanism. CCCPA intends to use a combination of independent and group assessments as a means of providing quantitative and qualitative measurements of subject knowledge gained and understanding of applicability. Given the nature of CCCPA's beneficiaries, specifically police and military participants, the bulk of monitoring and evaluation of trainings will be conducted during the training courses as there is no guarantee that participants will be available for follow-up. To mitigate the difficulties of reaching participants in the post training phase, CCCPA intends to further develop its alumni database and alumni online community through upgrading its website. The online alumni platform, among other tools, will allow CCCPA to maintain contact with participants, but also provides participants with an opportunity to network amongst themselves.
- 24- Good communications with the GoJ and UNDP is essential in developing a shared understanding of how the project is progressing. This will include submissions of quarterly progress reports, and a final report describing the achievements, periodic review and amendment of detailed Action Plan and budget allocations with UNDP to ensure that the project is meeting its targets. In the event that there are unavoidable changes to the agreed work plan, the project team will communicate this to UNDP immediately and will jointly develop a viable solution to be communicated by UNDP to the GoJ for consultation. The progress, achievements and challenges will be reviewed and discussed at the Project Board meeting.

synergies between the APSA roadmap and the Nairobi Action Plan, with a view to furthering Japanese-African partnership.

- 30- Building on the findings of the above workshop, and under the new project, CCCPA will hold one workshop to identify priority areas for cooperation in the fields of training and capacity building on peace and security in Africa. The workshop, which will bring together African and Japanese peacekeeping training centers, as well as officials responsible for training in UN and AU peacekeeping missions, will address issues such as meeting the mounting demands of the field, including in addressing new and emerging threats, as well as further harmonization between African peacekeeping centers. In addition, a second workshop will be held specifically for the five peacekeeping training centers that will be funded through the UNDP/Japan Fund to harmonize interventions and build on lessons learned/best practices.

Output 2:Enhance capacities of African local communities in preventing radicalization and extremism leading to terrorism.

- 31- During the last two years, CCCPA has developed the first of its kind training manual on preventing radicalization and extremism leading to terrorism in Africa. The curriculum was specifically designed to meet the demands of local leaders in Somalia and Nigeria (tribal religious, women and youth leaders), so as to enhance their ability to detect and interrupt radicalization of their communities. The trainings conducted using this manual were well received and were deemed to have had tangible results.
- 32- Recognizing the continued – indeed mounting – need for such trainings in Africa, CCCPA will continue providing its training to local officials and communities in Africa by means of three training courses/workshops.

Output 3: Enhance African capacities in peacekeeping.

- 33- The demand for qualified and well trained African peacekeepers is at record high. Moreover, African peacekeepers are operating in increasingly complex and dangerous environments, with new and emerging threats. Hence, the imperative for continuous – indeed expanded – training could not be clearer.
- 34- To this end, CCCPA will provide 8 training courses, targeting 160 trainees on peacekeeping, including pre-deployment trainings for peacekeepers in UN missions. CCCPA will also continue its cooperation with the United Nations Department of Peacekeeping Operations to organize trainings/workshops as opportunities arise.
- 35- During 2017, CCCPA will also host the annual meeting of the International Association for Peacekeeping Training Centers' (IAPTC), the single most important meeting of peacekeeping training centers. Also this year, CCCPA will host the annual meeting of the International Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Training Group (IDDRTG). Both events present invaluable opportunities to highlight Egyptian-Japanese cooperation in peacekeeping. This is of particular importance to Japan since 2017 marks the 25th anniversary of the enactment of the International Peace Cooperation Law, which enabled Japan to send not only its civilian personnel but also its Self-Defense Forces personnel to UN peacekeeping operations.

VII. MONITORING FRAMEWORK AND EVALUATION

6.1 M&E Framework

VIII. GENDER STRATEGY

63. To maximise impact of its training, CCCPA has managed, since 2013 and in partnership with the Finnish Crisis Management Centre, to mainstream gender across all its training programmes. While the project does not compose outputs that particularly aim at women empowerment in the area of peacekeeping and peacebuilding, CCCPA is making an effort to mainstream gender across its various training courses, by developing gender awareness through the use of gender analysis and presenting topics from a gender perspective in order to implement UNSCR 1325.

64. In addition to this, the project will equally strive to ensure that there is female representation in all of its courses. The project will continue to stress the need for female participants to all agencies and organizations.
