Part A. Integrating Programming Principles to Strengthen Social and Environmental Sustainability

QUESTION 1: How Does the Project Integrate the Programming Principles in Order to Strengthen Social and Environmental Sustainability?
Briefly describe in the space below how the project mainstreams the human rights-based approach
The project will follow the human-based approach. The project has been designed towards enhancing capacities of national and sub-national governments on integrated climate resilience planning and implementation while scaling up climate actions at the sub-national level. Hence the activities envisioned for the project require extensive consultation with government officials, CSOs, private sector, and other organizations. Throughout these consultations, human rights concerns such as inclusivity, equality, and non-discrimination will be prioritized, ensuring that the voices and needs of all individuals, especially marginalized and vulnerable groups, are addressed and integrated into the project's outcomes.
Briefly describe in the space below how the project is likely to improve gender equality and women's empowerment
The project is designed to improve gender equality and women's empowerment by ensuring active participation and meaningful contributions from women in all phases of project implementation. Specifically, gender is mainstreamed throughout SCALA to ensure that mitigation and adaptation actions in land use and agriculture are designed to promote gender equality and women's empowerment. The project in Nepal will produce an assessment report of gender responsive CSA tools and technologies and guidelines., women will be provided with opportunities and platforms to voice their opinions. Similarly, the Climate Promise support will strengthen sub-national governments in gender-responsive implementation of NDC plans. In collaboration with Climate Finance Network, we will prepare guidelines for gender-responsive budget. The project also integrates gender considerations into climate actions, supports capacity building for gender-responsive planning, and enhances green, local livelihood opportunities for women.
Briefly describe in the space below how the project mainstreams sustainability and resilience
The project mainstreams sustainability and resilience by enhancing the capacities of national and sub-national governments for integrated climate resilience planning and implementation. The project ensures long-term sustainability by engaging in extensive consultations with diverse stakeholders, including government officials, CSOs, and the private sector, the project incorporates inclusive and resilient development principles, addressing both current and future climate challenges. Specifically, the project has envisioned planting 2,000 saplings which will be monitored and reported for one year to increase their survival rate.
Briefly describe in the space below how the project strengthens accountability to stakeholders

DocuSign Envelope ID: E1D9403C-3557-4C2E-9FC1-2BFCB189BE12

To ensure the utmost accountability to stakeholders, UNDP utilizes its accountability mechanisms by engaging in a constructive and timely manner to address any concerns and complaints. The project strengthens accountability to stakeholders by fostering transparency and active participation throughout its planning and implementation phases. Extensive consultations with government officials, civil society organizations (CSOs), the private sector, and other relevant groups ensure that diverse perspectives and needs are integrated into the project's design. Regular progress reports, stakeholder meetings, and feedback mechanisms will be implemented to keep all parties informed and engaged. This inclusive approach ensures that stakeholders have a voice in decision-making processes and can hold the project accountable for its outcomes and impacts.
