1. Background and rationale

The socioeconomic crisis has exacerbated pre-existing forms of discrimination and inequalities, including gender inequalities, increasing harm and risks for women, girls and gender diverse people both in the home and in the community. The crisis is resulting in a deterioration of the prevalence of GBV as measured in The Women's Wellbeing Survey (2019), indicating that one in five (20.4%) ever-partnered women have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by an intimate partner in their lifetime and two in every five women (39.8%) have experienced physical, sexual, emotional and/or economic violence and/or controlling behaviours by a partner in their lifetime.

The financial constraints, especially the food inflation which has increased from 30.2% in March to 46.6% in April 2022 and Non-Food inflation increased from 39.1% May to 54.6% in June 2022¹, has had a devastating impact on families not being able to secure essential medical care and food. As indicated through assessments this has led to negative coping mechanisms, job and food insecurity that will place women and girls and other marginalized groups, already vulnerable to various forms of gender based violence, even further at risk of gender based violence, including sexual exploitation and abuse, and harmful practices such as child marriage. The impact of the socio economic crisis on electricity, transportation and telecommunications will also disrupt the availability and accessibility of services provision, limiting the ability of gender based violence survivors to access essential services. Health services have also deteriorated due to the national shortages of medical supplies and commodities, limiting availability and access to lifesaving sexual and reproductive health services as an essential part of the health sector response to gender based violence. Further, the Sri Lanka Joint Rapid Food Security Assessment conducted by WFP (2022, May) indicated “multiple district officials reported a rise in domestic violence, while also acknowledging that these cases are largely underreported, particularly during the current economic crisis.”

In terms of service providers access to shelter facilities, health, and legal services are impacted as indicated through the consultations with Shelter providers and the Hospital based GBV desks. Women Development Officers, Counseling Assistants and Public Health Midwives being partially immobile and constrained due to minimal resources to continue to provide essential services and the police being occupied with the ongoing uprisings of the population due to the lack of basic needs. The shelters provide for basic needs such as food, water, medicine, accommodation for the inmates and additionally arrange for psychosocial support, case management and legal aid. However, the crisis has also forced the shelters to limit their services and reduce the basic services to minimum.

Within this context, migrants in vulnerable situations and victims of trafficking have been disproportionately affected. A rapid assessment undertaken by the International Organization for Migration (IOM), including calls received to the IOM counter trafficking hotline, revealed, female domestic workers in particular are at an increased risk of exploitation and physical, sexual and psychological abuse. Within the country, women and children have been trafficked for sexual exploitation and forced prostitution. Incidents of child trafficking, cyber trafficking of women and children (producing pornographic content etc.) have also been reported in recent times. Further, with the prevailing economic crisis in Sri Lanka, loss of employment/self-reliance opportunities and dire financial straits, individuals in vulnerable situations can easily fall prey to traffickers and can ultimately be subjected to human trafficking and the related forms of exploitation.

The complexity of this ongoing emergency has led to negative coping due to job and food insecurity. Women and girls are highly vulnerable due to their reduced capacity to prioritize health and protection and the risk of localized breakdown of health and GBV protection referral mechanisms. Existing protection mechanisms for women in need, including survivors of sexual and gender-based violence and of trafficking, are severely compromised. Shelters have low to no budget to operate. Police officers maintaining prevention and risk mitigation for GBV are handling civil unrest. Essential services for health, psychosocial support, and GBV case management are hampered due to resource constraints. The cost of not prioritizing protection in the socioeconomic crisis response will be seen in violence left unchecked, soaring psychological distress, potential fatal incidents of GBV, erosion of gender equality gains and reinforcement of existing power dynamics to the detriment of women, girls and other marginalized groups.

2. Targeted locations

National level

Targeted interventions that will be implemented through the Shelters and reach the Districts of Colombo, Kandy, Matara, Batticaloa, Anuradhapura, Jaffna, Mullaitivu, Nuwara Eliya, Monaragala, Ampara, Gampaha, Vavuniya, Rathnapura, Kilinochchi, Matara and Kurunegala

3. Objectives

Overall Goal: To increase the availability of life-saving, multi-sectoral response and mitigation services for women, girls and other marginalized groups in Sri Lanka.

Objectives:

- To provide targeted lifesaving and survivor-centered protection services to ensure shelters are accessible for survivors of GBV and trafficking victims.
- To make available information on services and access to services for all vulnerable women, girls and marginalized populations.
- To enhance the capacity of the service providers and strengthen case management services for MHPSS and psychoeducation to develop the skills and strategies to improve the wellbeing of women and girls at risk.

4. Expected results and activities

The joint programme has been designed to provide strengthened access to protection and lifesaving support to women and girls at risk and survivors of GBV, trafficking and vulnerable communities, during this complex crisis in Sri Lanka. The interventions seek to provide a lifesaving, survivor-centred, multisectoral approach to integrate risk mitigation actions to ensure women and girls are not exposed to further harm and their rights. The response strategy integrates key components of ensuring shelters are strengthened for ongoing operations and the provision to take new victims/survivors; psychosocial support services for women and girls at risks and survivors of GBV and trafficking; referral pathways established and popularized for holistic response to survivors of GBV. Given the requisite rapid action, the proposed priority activities will build upon strengthening ongoing interventions of the participating United Nations Organizations, United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and International Organization for Migration (IOM), their service providers and networks to ensure highest impact and an immediate rollout.
