Part A. Integrating Programming Principles to Strengthen Social and Environmental Sustainability

QUESTION 1: How Does the Project Integrate the Programming Principles in Order to Strengthen Social and Environmental Sustainability?

Briefly describe in the space below how the project mainstreams the human rights-based approach

This project expects to contribute to Kazakhstan's international position as a development actor through capacitation of its foreign policy and ODA organizations – FPRI and KazAID. It is expected to provide a portfolio of solutions targeting different levels of the challenges to achieve the nation's policy effectiveness and sustainable development, as outlined in UNDP's Country Program Document. Among other things the project will mobilize and train civil society volunteers in different locations of Kazakhstan and Central Asia for the needs of its environmental projects, it will also put specific focus on women-led initiatives to promote their active participation and equip with necessary skills and knowledge and become agents of change in their communities.

Briefly describe in the space below how the project is likely to improve gender equality and women's empowerment

As an output 2, UNDP offers to create an online Database of Kazakhstan Development Experts – a pool of local experts who are available for short-term assignments to the countries KazAID is supporting. The database will feature qualified Kazakhstani professionals from different sectors who can be deployed as KazAID consultants. The database will have option to disaggregate specialists by gender to mainstream gender equality and encourage wider participation of female professionals in the development agenda. Also the proposed activity of output 3 will put specific focus on women-led initiatives to promote their active participation and equip with necessary skills and knowledge and become agents of change in their communities. To ensure cross-pollination of practices and experience exchange, a regional conference for volunteers from Central Asia will be organized.

Briefly describe in the space below how the project mainstreams sustainability and resilience

KazAID has increased capacity to develop and implement youth-engagement and eco-volunteering projects through joint work with UNDP. Together with the UN Volunteers Programme, UNDP proposes to mobilize and train civil society volunteers in different locations of Kazakhstan and Central Asia for the needs of its environmental projects, following the best international and national practices. A network of volunteers in several locations will be created and capacitated on the environmental agenda that UNDP promotes.

Briefly describe in the space below how the project strengthens accountability to stakeholders

Although the project will be implemented through a direct implementation modality (DIM), coordination, and consultations with key national partners, KazAID, FPRI, and other stakeholders will be conducted throughout project cycle. Project's approved resources will be used in line with the conditions and instructions by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs outlined in the allocation letter. Close and regular communication will be ensured with key institutions and government partners, including the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, FPRI, KazAID, and local authorities for on-the-ground activities.
